Following your recent inquiry regarding the possibility of Reader's Digest publishing the Muñoz profile in an early issue, I have been in touch with DeWitt Wallace, Editor of the Digest, through Don Robinson, and have just received word that the article will be scheduled in the November issue.

This way Reader's Digest will benefit from the timeliness of the Governor's being in the news as a result of the Freedom House Award and the climax of the election campaign here.

The November issue of Reader's Digest normally comes out around October 25 in the States and reaches here around November 1. However, it may be possible to arrange air shipment that would bring the magazine here earlier, or to have reprints made that could be circulated here earlier. Currently, I am trying to obtain an advance proof, which is difficult, but I expect to get it.
