Hawaii Gains Some, Loses Bit as State

Periódico: The Miami Herald
Fecha: August 7, 1959

Hawaiian income totaling $2,000,000,000 in 1957 and local ($10,000,000 in 1957) taxes as residents of the territory.

The Hawaiian electorate,awaii is going to be represented of its inhabitants, Hawaii officials say, in the 1958 election, the first time the state has been able to send a delegate to the House of Representatives.

In any event, the federal government has become more sensitive to the interests of Hawaii, due to the direct representation of its citizens in Congress.

As a territory, Hawaii was a rather small and unimportant program area. It was the largest of the 50 states in population, but it was small in territory and was often overshadowed by its neighbors, the Pacific islands.

But whether on a territory or state level, the federal government has become more sensitive to the interests of Hawaii, due to the direct representation of its citizens in Congress.

As a territory, Hawaii was a rather small and unimportant program area. It was the largest of the 50 states in population, but it was small in territory and was often overshadowed by its neighbors, the Pacific islands.

For all of that, in Hawaii, there are reasons that it is not the same as a territory.

For all of that, in Hawaii, there are reasons that it is not the same as a territory.

For all of that, in Hawaii, there are reasons that it is not the same as a territory.

For all of that, in Hawaii, there are reasons that it is not the same as a territory.